If you live in Canada or hope to one day, you probably have your eye on the fast-paced Canadian job market. Because the world has changed so much over the last decade – even more so in 2020 – there are emerging industries and industries that are growing at phenomenal speed.

We take a look at the fastest growing industries in Canada to identify where the best jobs may lie, and how to get in them. From new qualifications to simply upskilling, learn what is available and what you need to do for a flourishing career in a future Canada.

Three reasons to work in a fast-growing industry

Fast-growing industries may be able to afford professionals better opportunities – and more of them. Here are just some of the reasons why working in a fast-growing industry should be a priority:

- > Fast-growing industries are getting bigger, and that means there will be more jobs and potentially more job security.
- > Fast-growing industries are getting bigger because there is typically more demand for them. This may mean that employers will be able to pay you more for your work.
- > Fast-growing industries are usually innovative and trying to do new things and disrupt existing processes. This may make the jobs involved more interesting and improve your job satisfaction.
